Col. Allen, supervisor of Census, for this district has completed his work for Breckenridge County and gives out the following figures for this city and Hardinburg and says "Whilst the result is very gratifying for Cloverport it is not so for Hardinburg." Population of Cloverport 1880, 1527, increase since 1880, 451. Hardinburg 1880, 616, increase since 1880, 31.

Hon. G. W. Gates, Messrs. H. P. and A. C. Thompson, J. A. Hays, and Mr. Phil Watkins, of Owensboro, came up last Wednesday to meet the remains of Capt. J. W. Bell, at this point. The gentleman had at heart's time here and spent it in looking at our natural gas and its utilization. Of course, they were delighted with it and left as all people do who come here, with a good impression of our town and its future.

The Louisville Market.

The principal feature of interest in the tobacco market this week is the active and advancing tendency in dark tobaccos. Everything of that type except trash and the commonest of low and low leaf has sold relatively high and the demand has been active and strong. A line of Indian dark leaf was sold at Givens, Harding & Co.'s which had been offered and rejected in February last. Even hoghead brought an advance over the rejection price and some of them brought nearly double. There was a large lot of this tobacco, and none of the February prices reached over 40 cents. This week the Burley market is a little hard to quote this week. The proportion of Burley offerings are much less than a few weeks ago, and the proportion of good and fine leaf is still less. The market for this type seems to be a little unsettled. Last week there was considerable speculative feeling which caused a very stiff and rather feverish market for this type. This week the market is probably no lower, but speculators seem a little more timid, caused probably by the threatening weather and not so frequent showers in the Burley district. This feeling has probably lessened the snap and activity in the Burley market. The offerings however of really good articles of Burley leaf have been limited that it has all found reasonably fair manufacturers demand at quoted prices.

Children Enjoy

The pleasant fair, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative and it is either mother be native or bilious the most gratifying results follow its use, so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

Mr. Blaine's opinion of the McKinley bill is unique and picturesque. In order to get the drift of his ideas you must read between the lines of his letter to Mr. Frye. He is a diplomat by both nature and profession and knows better than most men how to put a graceful compliment and fling a sarcasm in the same breath.

The bill in many respects is a wise one, he says, but it is a political blunder. He is pleased with some of its provisions, but the thing will not work and must be abandoned. It is in accordance with the policy of protection, but it might be allowed to make a suggestion he would like to remark that it fails to protect. It is a great and glorious measure, quite worthy of the patriotism of the republic, but unless it is killed in Congress it will knock that party blacker than Gile's kite. It guards the financial interests of the country and is therefore to be commended, but it closes every foreign market to American products and is therefore to be condemned without stint.

The result is that Mr. Blaine is preparing a dose of strychnine for the bill and hopes to deliver the remains to the hands and motto of the undertaker. It might not be policy to say that, so he praises it fully and with so many double entendres that you can swear he believes in it or doesn't believe in it just as you please. You pay your money and you take your choice.

We are still looking for Mr. Blaine's conversion to a sound democratic policy. He stands trembling on the brink, but may soon leap into the flood and be laid in the rolling Jordan of democracy.

The grand issue between the two parties is the market. "Give us the whole world to trade with," cry the democrats. "Let us shut the whole world out and chew each other up," answers the republicans.

Mr. Blaine is trying to open South American ports. That is good politics and good economy, but it is the democratic, not the republican policy. We remind Mr. Blaine of a very interesting old saying: "It is never to late to mend."

Death of Mr. Jas. G. Root.

On Monday morning April 22nd 1890 the Angel of Death came and with only a few minutes warning took the devoted wife and mother Mrs. Miro D. Root's Root was a member of the Presbyterian church at Cloverport a true Christian in every sense of the word and best loved by those who knew her best. Hardly had the heart wounds made by her death begun to heal over when again the messenger came to the already bereaved family this time taking the dear, feeble, gray haired, father, Jas. G. Root. Mr. Root never fully recovered from the shock and grief occasioned by the death of his devoted wife and often expressed a willingness to go and be with her. He was taken ill Thursday morning July 3rd but was not considered seriously ill until evening. He seemed to suffer little but gradually grew weaker until about 3 p. m. Sunday July 6th when he ceased to breathe. He leaves one son and three daughters who will long miss their intelligent father.

Jas. G. Root was born Jan. 1st, 1818 at Rootstown O. While quite young his father died and he went to Cincinnati in search of a congenial employment. Having a fondness for bookbinding he became a first class journey and for several years was engaged on some of the largest boats then plying between Cincinnati and New Orleans. In 1843 he was married to Miss Mrs. D. Baxter and several years later left the river since which time he has been interested in saw milling. During the past eighteen years he has been identified with saw mill interests in this country.

Mr. Root was a great reader and could converse well and fluently on most subjects.

A Taste of Kentucky Bluegrass.

In the course of the ten days that followed the last ten days of May, I had an opportunity to taste it pretty well and my mind has had a grand flavor ever since. I had an opportunity to see the restless and fiery American nature of cars in a more equable and beneficent mood than I had ever before seen in all its savageness and acrimony gone, no thought now but submission to the land and wants of man. I afterwards saw the prairies of Illinois and the vast level stretches of farming country of Northern Ohio and Indiana, but these lands were nowhere quite so human, quite so beautiful, or quite so productive as the Bluegrass region. One likes to see the earth's surface lifted up and undulating a little as it heaved and swelled with emotion, it suggests more life, and at the same time the sense of repose is greater. There is no repose in prairie, it is stagnation, it is a dead level. Those immense stretches of flat land pain the eye, as all life and expression had gone from the face of the earth. There is just unvarying evenness enough in the Bluegrass region to give nobility and variety to the landscape. From almost any given point one commands broad and extensive views—immense fields of wheat or barley, or hemp or grass or clover, or of wool and pastures—John Burroughs in July Canby.

COOL WAVE

Would be very acceptable at this particular time, but in the absence of the wave the next best thing for sweetening humanity to do is to come to our refrigerating establishment and buy one of our Coldwave Outlets, or Coat and Vest, and then you can bid defiance to old Sol. We have sold an immense amount of these goods this summer. By special arrangement with the "clerk of the weather" we were early posted as to the weather this summer. We accordingly made arrangements for an immense supply of hot-weather garments, and we have today the only complete assortment of these necessary garments in the city. We have them in all the popular fabrics and many styles and colorings not to be found in any other house. Our prices are right. Our stock of Light-weight Cassimere and Worsted Suits offers many desirable styles at rock-bottom prices.

Original Package Mischief.

The mischievous consequences of the Supreme Court's original package decision brought to public notice almost daily by the newspapers.

Liquor dealers in prohibition States profit and even the local law, and when any attempt is made to prosecute them the courts find fault to decide in their favor. In this way the State law is practically annulled. Intemperance men have been held, protests voiced and appeals to the courts made by the people; but all in vain.

The citizens of an Iowa town have even resolved to take the law into their own hands and mete out summary punishment to any original package offender. In Kansas a public meeting declared that "the people are a higher judiciary than even the State Government" and the Lieutenant Governor proclaimed that the laws of the State were paramount to a decision of the Supreme Court. Of course all that is as wrong as it is rash and foolish.

There are but two reliable remedies—one lies with Congress and the other with the Supreme Court.

Resolutions of Respect.

On the death of Miss Jessie Witt who was a member of the Methodist Sunday School in Cloverport, Ky.

WHEREAS, the hand of Providence has removed our friend and sister from the scene of her temporal labors, and from our Sunday School, and in view of the loss we have sustained by the death of our friend, and of the still greater loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to her, be it

Resolved, that we deeply mourn her untimely departure, and sincerely regret the loss of her faithful attendance at our Sunday School, taking refuge in the thought, however, that after having endured her earthly strife she has joined the Blessed in Heaven.

Resolved, that we tender our heartfelt sympathies to the afflicted family, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best.

Resolved, that the above resolution be published in the Breckenridge News.
